Corporate Structuring

EJA assists VIP clients with all aspects of corporate formation, including the most important decision: the initial choice of the proper form of entity on or off the beautiful island of Saint Barth.

Business structures can vary as widely as the types of businesses that use them. When setting up a business, choosing the right structure can be critical to the success and life of the company. EJA will help you understand in depth exactly why a particular structure is recommended for your entity and represent your interests.

The firm does this with respect to a wide variety of entity matters, including the formation of:

- Corporations
- Partnerships
- Limited partnerships
- LLCs
- And more

EJA has the knowledge and insider view to the laws and regulations in Saint Barth and, as a result, can help you decide the best structure that suits your needs.

International Taxation

EJA has extensive experience in advising clients, including corporations and private investors, in matters of international taxation. The firm's attorneys help its clients understand the tax consequences of foreign investments, how these investments will be taxed in their native country and how they will be taxed abroad.

Litigation

The litigation department handles a broad range of complex matters in French courts, before agencies, administrative bodies and arbitration tribunals. Areas of concentration include:

- General commercial and civil litigation
- Corporate disputes
- International dispute resolution
- Bankruptcy and white-collar crime
- Administrative disputes in real estate and taxation

Compassion, Independence and Integrity at All Times and in Whatever Circumstances

---

Emmanuel Jacques, managing partner, grew up in Paris, France, where he attended private school, graduating with a baccalaureate of sciences and mathematics. Thereafter, Mr. Jacques attended Paris University of Law and graduated at the age of 23, becoming the youngest attorney in France.

Following his graduation, Mr. Jacques was named Director of the Cabinet of the CEO at the Paris Chamber of Commerce, overseeing 2,500 employees. In 1992, in fulfillment of his military obligation, Mr. Jacques resigned from his cabinet post and served as a civil soldier in Mexico, where he helped French companies settle into the region. Upon completion of his military obligation in 1993, Mr. Jacques returned to France, resuming his legal career as a junior partner at a Paris law firm. By 1995, at the age of 27, Mr. Jacques established his own practice in Paris, and was later named Of Counsel for a U.S. firm based on Paris' Avenue Montaigne.

Recognizing that every action has the potential for global financial repercussions, Mr. Jacques is one of a select few attorneys who is well-versed in International Finance, International Relations, and Management. Indeed, Mr. Jacques studied Management at HEC Paris, the highest-ranked business school in Europe; received his diploma in International Relations and Diplomacy at CEDS; and earned his Master's degree in Corporate Finance. It is this unique combination of legal practice and corporate financial knowledge that has distinguished Mr. Jacques as a truly exceptional talent in international legal advocacy.

During his time in Paris, Mr. Jacques taught at Paris University of Law and was named Vice President of the parent organization of the 112 French Chambers of Commerce abroad, as well as Special Advisor to the French government for trade with Nordic countries.

For more than 20 years, the Emmanuel Jacques Almosnino law firm has effectively performed negotiations, structuring, and financing of a wide range of high-value assets. The firm's client portfolios include VIPs from the United States, Brazil, and Russia. The firm has successfully negotiated the purchase of properties valued at $60 million; represented American private equity companies in transactions involving five-star hotels in Saint Barth; and successfully handled the negotiation of financing up to $40 million of commercial leases in the most famous areas of Paris. The firm regularly handles the acquisition of luxury real estate not only in Saint Barth, but also in Paris and other famous locations in France.
